

September 30th

[Poetry]

Ashtyn Baker

And other times he tasted like the cheap sweat

Of cigarettes and frustration.

Mostly though, he tasted like warmth:

A crackling fire on a snowing night, or

An autumn stroll

Heated by the blush of trees

Newly kissed by frost.